

NO PAPPAGELD FOR LOVE-CHILD

THEO NYHABA

actor skeletons are creeping out of the closet and rattling like hell.

The man who plays a ruthless executive and goes by his real name in the popular is going around boasting about his pending wedding to fellow actress but the mama of one of his children is an unhappy woman.

Cape Town-based the mother of his seven-year-old boy, says the actor doesn't pay regular pappageld for his son.

She says he sends only the odd R500 now and again.

This week who is on the cover of a weekly magazine with poured his heart out about his undying love for his fiancée. is crying foul.

In the magazine does not acknowledge the child and his mom, but mentions his two other kids who are in East London with their mother.

says she is not surprised.

"In fact, I don't read things about because they hurt me and my child," says

She relates how she met before he became famous.

The couple met back in 2000 in Langa, Cape Town, from where they both come.

says was unemployed and she gave him emotional and financial support. She says she gave him transport money to go to auditions and paid for his portfolio.

"I was part of his life when he had nothing but I'm not shocked by his behaviour," says

The 31-year-old says she has taken the maintenance matter to the family court but they have been struggling to deliver summons as they don't know where lives.

"I was told they have sent private investigators to trace him, so I have been waiting for developments. The problem is I can't afford a good lawyer," says

She claims was in Cape Town recently but didn't even take time to visit his child. He had allegedly promised to buy him new clothes in December, but did not deliver.

"If he wants to send R500 once a year that's fine. Lately he doesn't even take my calls. I had to get a second cellphone number – then he answered the phone," says denies that he is not supporting his kid. He says his ex has gone the legal route first and now she is going the media route.

"About four weeks ago I received a call from lawyers informing me that they would be sending summons, which I'm still waiting for," says

He says the magazine story ignited jealousy among his exes.

"I don't know why exes can't remain just that and stop envying me in my new life. I've moved on.

"I will wait for the court summons to be delivered and will take it from there," says
